

Section

B

METRO

WEDNESDAY

June 20, 2001 **

▶ REGIONAL DIGEST B2 ▶ OBITUARIES B4-5 ▶ WEATHER B8

R.E. GRASWICH

Tabloid tell-all: Tabloid 95, the controversial Old Sacramento nightclub, won't go quietly into the night. Tabloid owner Leonard Giordano hopes to keep operating his hip-hop dance joint on Second Street, but faces an uphill battle for his lease, which expires in December. "The police have been trying to shut us down for years, but if anyone interferes with our lease, we will sue them," said Jeff Kravitz, what's going to happen," Solomon said. "The music is loud and it's not my type of music, but I'm an equal-opportunity landlord. We'll just have to wait and see." Police have been blockading Old Sac on weekends, largely in response to crowds that gather around Tabloid. "The blockade is costing legitimate businesses a lot of money. It really intimidates people," Solomon said. Predictions: Look for the cops to become the tenant at 910 Second St.

Giordano's lawyer. "That includes the Police Department." The city has opened negotiations with Leonard's landlord, Frank Solomon Jr., to build a police service center on the site. "I don't know this winter. And in an amazing coincidence, look for the blockades to end around the same time. ...

□ □ □
The Bee's R.E. Graswich can be reached at (916) 321-1087 or rgraswich@sacbee.com.